This seminar is an outcome of the topic “International Career Prospectus for Hospitality graduates”

Hospitality Industry is one of the world’s largest and rapidly growing industries. In the 21st century, global economy is driven by three major industries includes technology, telecommunication and tourism.

"The hospitality industry around the world needs people with backgrounds in technology, engineering, finance, law, sales, marketing, food and beverage services & production, conference management, communications, real estate, human resources, labor relations, graphic design, foreign languages and more. Most of all, the industry needs workers with strong interpersonal skills, an ability that benefits the guest, the company and the employee.

Tourism is extremely labour intensive and a significant source of employment. It is among the world’s top creators of jobs requiring varying degrees of skills and allows for quick entry into the workforce for youth, women and migrant workers. In some countries, the contribution of tourism for employment is indispensable; for instance.

Travel and Tourism's total contribution to the global economy rose to 9.5% of global GDP. In total, nearly 266 million jobs (8.9% of total employment) were supported by Travel and Tourism in 2013 (1 in 11 of all jobs in the world). According to various Forums and media on New Developments and Challenge report, even though international tourism is affected by the global economic and social crisis, it is anticipated that the tourism sections global economy to provide 296 million jobs by 2019 so that tourism has the potential to become a major generator of job.

This seminar aims to discuss global opportunities in tourism and hospitality sectors, various challenges and issues to identify, provide students information on various opportunities, facts, concerns, precautions, guidelines and how to approach such various global Hospitality job opportunities.
